Citizenship

Citizenship is everything that has to do with being a citizen, or full member, of a country. Citizens have rights that are given by the country's government. For example, citizens have the right to be protected by a country's laws. In return, citizens have duties that they owe to the country. One of the most important duties is being loyal to the country.

Every country has its own rules about who is a citizen and how to become one. Many countries have set up four basic ways to become a citizen. First, anyone who is born in the country is a citizen of that country. Second, anyone whose mother or father is a citizen of the country is also a citizen. Third, anyone who is married to a citizen becomes a citizen. Fourth, a person who goes through a process called naturalization becomes a citizen.

Being a recognized citizen of a country has many legal benefits, which may include the rights to vote, to hold public office, to social security, to health services, to public education, to permanent residency, to own land.
