Text:

I think that my primary school days were the most joyful and careless days in my whole days. I went to school with a big feeling of happiness to meet my meet my friends and teacher, Even though my first days were a bit hard. I was the smallest pupil in my class and I had short ginger (red) hair. My classmates made fun of me all the time calling me: "small carrot". But being funny and helpful made them love me later. One day our teacher asked us to draw a picture of our family. I drew four carrots. When the teacher asked, I said: "this is my family. We're all redheads". All pupils were laughing but I ended up by standing at the back of the class for being impolite. All children at school became good friends; we were playing and learning together every day. We started to write and read, it was very interesting and charming. We were active and curious, we wanted to know everything about the world. During breaks I used to play with toys: boys with cars and girls with dolls. In the corridor, we had to walk in a line by pairs. We always wanted to run but the teachers always stopped us and ordered to walk in pairs. Primary school gave us a lot of knowledge and education. It formed our personality. I can thank my primary school for my fantastic childhood.
